The one class doesn't work because it does different functions then what the name suggests, and one method doing multiple functions reduces cohesion. To fix that, I put the unrelated code into a different class named Location that deals with the validateLocation method and helper methods and put the read methods in the MyReader only, which increases the cohesion of both classes.